

SULTAN OF SULU WILL SOON BE IN PACIFIC PARADISE

THE SULTAN OF SULU (ON RIGHT).
Who will arrive in Honolulu next week.

Honolulu is soon to be visited by a Sultan—the Sultan of Sulu, made famous by the musical comedy of that name. He is making a tour of the Pacific and will arrive here next Wednesday on the last leg of his long journey. The Sultan left his dominions in the Philippines clad in the odd garb of his nation and rank, and now he is in the United States wearing a Peadilly-made clothing. Hadji Jamulai Kiram II., is the head of the Mohammedan faith in the Philippines and is a pensioner of the United States. On his tour he is accompanied by Dato Rajo Moda, his son, Charles J. Worble, an interpreter, and four Jolo attendants. During his sojourn in the United States he will become well acquainted with the President who was governor of the Philippines and is a pensioner of the United States. The Sultan has declared, since he has been in the United States, that one wife is the policy, as an abundance of wives causes him much trouble. It is said that on his tour the Sultan will carry with him a small fortune. He intends to use the proceeds in the development of his little sultanhood. The Sultan receives the magnificent pension of $125,000 a month. This is in real gold coin. The high price of living in his kingdom caused him to decide that his valuable collection of pearls should be disposed of in the best markets and he decided that he would be his own salesman. The pension of $125,000 does not go far when one has to clothe and feed fourteen wives. Many years ago he is said to have paid $25,000 for an English girl to become one of his wives. When Alice Roosevelt was a visitor in his kingdom, before she took Nicholas Longworth for her husband, the Sultan proposed marriage to her. He gave her a beautiful burnt leather saddle and some pearls for remembrance sake.

As the Sultan of Sulu has no intentions of buying a navy, as it was said Prince Tsai Hsun had, it is not likely that the local government will declare streets closed or the press kept away from him by special orders. The Sultan of Sulu, although he has a high sounding name and the United States government has him on its pension list, and he is still regarded as a monarch, will probably not get a salute from the national guard battery, and his august person may be approached by newspaper men just as if he were an ordinary mortal.

However, Honolulu may have a better opportunity next week to see the Chinese prince who is returning home on the Chiyo Maru. No orders have been issued by anyone to close streets to traffic and no orders have been issued that anyone is to receive him in state again.

BLUES AND BLACKS

We have just taken from their cases some of the tidiest suits in blue and black materials we have shown for many months.

ING AND DRESS COST IS TREBLED

The Gorgeous Must the Model of Sartorial Perfection Be Than Sheba of Old.

at the glittering vanities of women a distinct bearing upon prevailing prices has not been widely indicated. But may this not be a legitimate question? So extravagant have been the fashions of the Goddess of Gauds, women in the set of which she is not have a choice only between wearing her whimsies or humbly resigning from her wicked world, says a Thomas Antrim in September. Not only is one handsome gown removed required of a woman who is coming socially, or one who wishes to be known as a model of "sartorial perfection," but a dozen equally hand-dressed, with accessories in keeping with the fashion and cut to reason and to the taste and figure of the wearer. More gorgeous must be at after dark functions than of old—she must twinkle and gleam, though not too obtrusively. Must no longer rustle stiffly, as the vogue five years ago; her gowns must be softly rich, her laces must be supplemented by superb embroideries over cloth of gold or silver; embroideries enriched in turn by sequins, sometimes mock, often real, over all is thrown a veil of chiffon adds to the mystery, softens the lines and notably increases the expense. Thus she expresses herself in her gown. She is dress mad. The chronic of the fifties have much to say of their wit and charm; compare a little of their frills and furbies, nothing of barbaric splendor. All normal women wish to look to wear good looking clothes that are well cut and worthy of ten thousand eyes; but few are there who would feel elated at being as a fashion doll or a clothes fact must now be faced, to wit: That there are women galore whose barbaric adornments are stolen in part from the house money, and who shall say me nay? The credulity of husbands on this score is matched only by the fond belief of wives regarding their husbands' "meagre" lunches downtown, so perhaps this evens up matters materially.

Granted the cost of high living has about doubled, is it not true as well that the cost of high dressing has trebled? Extravagance is on her high horse these days, en route for the devil, it would seem. While dowdiness is both a blunder and a handicap, cleverness is not so rapid as to make that error, nor is she likely to sink her individuality to the extent of being known by the glory of her gowns. When prices soar she does not blame the meat lords entirely, nor the egg barons. She decides that so long as the Goddess of Gauds makes women her puppets, husbands—Messrs. Meat and Eggs included—must pay, and in order to pay prices must and will tower along the entire devouring line.

NOISE RESTRICTS MOTORISTS.

Owners of automobiles throughout the country are rapidly bringing upon themselves some rigid restrictions which they will not enjoy. Reform legislation is always slow in coming, and for that reason generally goes farther than is necessary. It seems to be a case of the breaking loose of pent up waters. The annoyances referred to are the unnecessary use of horns, whistles and exhaust. Many drivers seem to have a mania for making all the noise they can, just some should fail to realize they are in a moving car. The smoke nuisance is equally unnecessary and offensive, and that it also can be prevented is demonstrated in nearly all European cities where heavy fines are imposed for violation. The result is a smoking car is seldom seen, for other drivers immediately call attention of the offender to his car.

The motorcycle is even more offensive in its noise making. This, too, is equally unnecessary. The motorcycles in England make no more noise than a sewing machine. The public has about reached its limit of endurance of these disturbances of the peace, and unless the offenders promptly reform themselves, city ordinances should and will be passed and enforced without regard to who the offender may be. This is an instance where a ten or twenty-dollar fine will work a prompt and permanent cure.

LOST ITS NOVELTY.

Lippincott's. Many stories are told of a certain section of the South where the inhabitants are noted for their longevity, but none better illustrates the view the natives take of the matter than this: "Your father must be getting pretty well on in years," said a cousin from the city to a farmer. "Yes; pap's nigh on to ninety." "Health good?" "No; not just now. He ain't been feeling himself for some time back." "What seems to be the trouble?" "I don't know. Sometimes I think farming don't agree with him any more."

There will be no difference in the meals in the Cafe on account of repairs to the kitchen. The excellence which has marked them since the opening will be maintained.
